DETAILED ACTION

Continued Examination Under 37 CFR 1.114

A request for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, including the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e), was filed in this application after final rejection. Since this application is eligible for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, and the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e) has been timely paid, the finality of the previous Office action has been withdrawn pursuant to 37 CFR 1.114. Applicant's submission filed on September 16, 2005 has been entered.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

- (a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claim 1 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Bentsen (US 4673383) in view of Kapperman et al. (US 6004032).

Bentsen (figure 8) teaches reclosable closure structure with one single pair of ribs 55 with one rib of each pair positioned one at a respective margin of the respective base member to secure the base member to the web or film while permitting the fastening strip to be spirally wound and retained in such a configuration by retaining the spirally wound assembly against lateral displacement as would permit entanglement during payoff or unwinding of the strip from a supply roll and possible interference with the processing to which the zipper strip assembly is subjected downstream from the payoff from the supply roll (col. 6, lines 7-24; col. 5, lines 39-54). The closure is separable and defines a male/female closure. The difference is that each has flanges extending from the base members. However, Kapperman et al. (figure 11) teaches a closure fastener comprising a male/female 152, 154 closure between a pair of opposed base members secured to package walls 156, 158 respectively, wherein a single flange extends upwardly from the female member 154 and is inherently capable of being used for attachment of the closure to a web or film through the statement that the female profile 154 is secured to a package wall 158 (col. 9, lines 44-45). There are no flanges extending from either side of the base of the male member 152. As it would be beneficial to provide an asymmetric flange structure so as to have a particular asymmetric flexibility to the web structure on the device of Bentsen, it would have been obvious to modify the closure structure of the device of Bentsen so as to maintain the ribs at the margins of the closure members, but to have only a single flange extend from one of the closure members as taught by Kapperman et al. (figure 1) as being a desirable configuration by providing an asymmetric base on the female member.

Claim 5 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Bentsen (US 4673383) in view of Kapperman et al. (US 6004032) as applied to claim 1 above, and further in view of Custer et al. (US 5216787).

Further modification of the closure of Bentsen such that sealant material is co-extruded on to each rib would have been obvious in view of Custer et al. (figure 3) teaching that it is desirable to do so in order to have intermediate ribs 325 between the closure and adhesive ribs that act as a tie material to better match the material of the closure to that of the adhesive wherein it is desirable to have the materials co-extruded so that there is a stronger securement.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments with respect to the claims have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection necessitated by applicant's amendment.
